

to:
the stack of unsent letters in my diary the words of long ago buried in a graveyard memories that never got to breathe the sum of parts long forgotten a melted candle once burning brightly now a puddle of wax stuck to the sole of my shoe. the burden I carry in the muddled waters of my consciousness the words that died before i could give them flight—for you.

—Anisha Jain

Chrysalis

i to you, a summer's golden end the knife held by the blade, pretty in blood, soaked up like pomegranates.

there's something holy about the haunt in the back of my throat, counting 1 2 3 stars in the night. a sheepless field to linger in, i think it's an ugly love when things go missing. spoken out against a pink horizon, the moon hasn't been here long enough to have our secrets.

i used to pretend to love you something beautiful, in a dream where it all began.
in a house with dead parakeets along the walls, where we could graze for days, never minding the mess.

i to you, a bitter cold beginning the light on the ceiling, ugly by nature, useful sometimes in the night when i'd miss you longer, needed you better.

but i did better being lonely, you sought to fill my nightmares with a silver tongue and a quick fin.

i loved you less in the spring and winter, beginnings and endings were your best showings. sunlight kissed you, i was jealous, i took out the sun and promised you freedom. you cried, i laughed, it was an afternoon to remember,
no delights, no songs, just two lost souls in a pool of sweat, dying to remember how it felt before the earth stopped spinning.

-Anisha Jain

'Dear Sister'

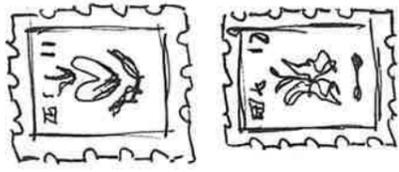

You arrive without a sound, like a thought in the mind.
Bringing with you a sense of peace, both gentle and kind.
But as the days wane and shadows dance in the night You leave and you take it all away.

With each farewell, a part of me goes astray, bound to you, in your presence,
I sway.
Your leaving steals a piece of my heart's
away,

Yet in your absence, life's colours seem to fade.

In the silence between us, unspoken words lie, in letters unwritten, emotions united.
For I long to express what words cannot say, but they remain unsent, in the light of day.
For in your coming and going, I find my tether, an eternal bond that binds us together.
Though you take with you parts of my soul's array, know that in my heart, you'll forever stay.

~ Anaya Narmah

Delhi
Per Simple
123456 0000

Mia Sonella
123456
Per Simple
200

Your bed next to me is empty right now! no bedsheets, no pillows!
not even the dragon you hug every night while sleeping! I can feel the time sunning out! one grain of sand at a time!
used to hate sunning! but I would run miles!
just to sit under the frangipani tree with you! I hated after midnight superint wouldn't have slept a wink! if sleep brought in nightmares for you! Hate is a very strong word! not appropriate for such trivial things! But it's not trivial anymore, is it? A strong word! but it found a place in your heart! the place I thought would always stay reserved for me! The walls have almost completely come in! time for apologies seems long forgotten! Love is a strong word too, you know? They say to understand it you must feel it! The indifference in your eyes! has made me understand the complexities of the lack of it! I am crying like a baby! now! there is no space left for the walls to occupy! trivial issues, cause ubiquitous sorrows!
just know that I love you, okay?!

Aahana Gupta

Mio Anice
12345 00.

i would replay each video to hear your muffled laughter behind the camera, a garden of touch-me-nots, but for you i'll grow a fobby.

Fleeting glimpses-i know i've caught you staring you know it too.

i'll string together the beads for every time i thought of you, tie it around your wrist so you carry with you a confession i'll never make.

the slight parting of your lips when you smile or the way you hold onto the hem of your shirt i'll shove my hands in my pockets to keep them from reaching out for yours.

i'll swallow the sun, for you to find us in the stars each night.

i just hope you know, you are more familiar than the tinkling of my anklet, as if i've known you for a life time and sin more.
this is crazy, i am sorry.

CARTE POSTALE

I learned, I learned, I learned elsewhere / From muses unhired by you, dear mother, I make one day to see you, mother, Floating above me in bluest air / On a green balloon bright with a million / Flowers and Bluebirds that never were.
 Never, never, found anywhere.

Sylvia Plath

The Michlers
 no. 894 pine.
 Charleston
 29315

That paranoid
 Bohemian
 Could he not watch the good, galaxies away Mio Dio, we are too foolish / Too imprudent to understand your creations / Too insane to even have had found answers through his pieces Betsy, the fortunate ragazza Could you watch the good in those creations / The creations made just for you / For you, an amateur, have the powers to find answers Ah! Mi dispiace mio amore Thee had not reached insanity yet.

i love you still.

i'm sitting alone perched on a rock / the sky above is wide & full of twinkling stars / and i wanted to write to someone / but i couldn't think of anyone but you.

The air is Suedening, the voices near me, seemingly getting louder.
 Reaching out into the desolate maze, I grasp at the air, Hoping to discern your voice, unable to fathom, the present that I always opened;
 The one with a covetous red ribbon, was incessantly brimming with your absence. ~ Prisha

Amos 17 Amos 17 Amos 17

gli occhi marroni

Hello, / i can't seem to get rid of you / you follow me into places we used to go / you visit me on the swing set behind the old house / like a name that comes out of nowhere / you're become my nightmare - my guilt! you're like the gleja in shells / the burns and marks i hid / i bury you again and again / and yet you come back alive in my mind / i'm sorry i'm tired / i can't carry you any more / goodbye old friend.

~ Anisha

CARTE POSTALE

I had forgotten that this morning it was a Sunday and I woke up at seven.
 I went to the park and saw some children throwing pebbles into the lake.
 They laughed every time someone's clashed with another. Sometimes I miss the fast too, the days we would naively laugh together.
 You would lightly hum Kishore Kumar while brushing my hair, I would squint because of the sun in my eyes and somewhere in your hum
 I would forget.

- Sharanya

i've been trying to find a center for a while!
 something that anchors me when dangerous fishes try to float me away. but the stability makes me only see the futility of a single sun.
 i'll be a sky full of little stars, twice the sun, thrice the fun.

~ Pavidhi

Dad i have so much to say to you, and so much i never will. ☆

I hate the way your stare weighs me down, compressing all my words ☆ ☆ into little barbed wires.

I wouldn't dare to let this foul air, corrupt my thoughts, but i guess it's all right, for ink to besmirch them.

☆ I think you reside in me dad, a statue with steel nerves, and i drink in your blood.
I've made a god out of you, you and your medusa stare, breaks my glass heart.
I see through three fragments of it, now a kaleidoscope,
colliding me,
you and the dark.

Dad, you only grow with me. the version of you that i've decided to seed deep inside me, with roots that curl around my veins.
I'll carry you around with me, a deep viscous liquid, that rejects my broken pieces, to the surface,
to the world.

-Parvathi Saboo

Dear mom,
 There's been something floating around this thick skull of mine Take it with a grain of salt, I truly hope you'll be alright.
 Your mother railed at
 you.
 I'll blame it on our culture
 I'm nothing but a pile of hurt with no structure I'd tell you your words sting, if I wasn't scared your love was conditional I swear to you, I'm not broken you're just overly traditional The hands you raised me with have shattered me too But you made me who I am so I should be grateful to you I love you so much,
 I'm guilty when I'm in pain But you never listen, we're both stubborn and vain.

- Ojasvi Mehta

The breath i feel for you

I feel with entirety

It's the absent affection Resulting in the paucity of satiety

You are just so... beautiful and pretty

It's not the way you look

It's not even the way you speak

It's just the way you are My phobias are your eyes and your smiles not colours or stars

On sleepless nights i can't help but think

How it would feel to be loved by you

Broken and mended

Safe and pretty

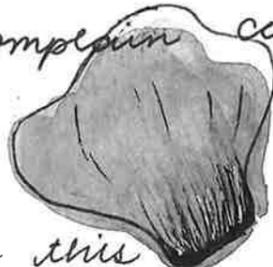

Finally comprehended

Whole and guilty

At the end of the day i can't complain cause

I am loved right?

No, but i am still a coward

I am sitting on the floor as I write this

And i know you will never read it Because

I have and always will love you more than

I could ever let you know and my broken heart chooses to believe that you have loved me too more than be ready

you'd ever
No show

- Saara Geel

To anyone who can pretend to be my knight in shining armour, even if it's just for a while, I can barely remember the smell of my daddy's daisies. He had fields of them, he said all of them were just for me. I just know that they smelt sweet, and they reminded me of sleep. There was a polaroid of me, smiling

Jiya

As i held a pink bouquet of blood red poppies. I clearly remember that night, when they plucked me from my home, and shut me in the prison of nightmares, A world of worms, i was forced to live in.
 They stripped me of my soul, and they left me dead in the body, so I write this with empty eyes. These walls have turned me into a liar. The scumbag, the scoundrel, they said i bargained with demons, lost my legend, while i burned in fire they drank me dry, as they whispered about a life that i wasn't allowed to live all my dreams and delusions, poisons and petals now just create slippages in my systems.

Dear prince, i struggle to find small slips of sublime, I knew it the entire time, their betrayal stitched with in their faces. I can't even try to escape, all alone with my plans and portals, So, i wait for you, refusing to swim in a liar's waters.

If you could decipher me, then I'm glad,
 If you couldn't then consider my plea urgent.

— Rudrani Rajyalakshmi

Credits:

Editor-in-Chief
Aarisha Jain

Art Editor-in-Chief
Jessica G. Kaur

Teacher-in-Charge
Ms. Sukanya Chatterjee

Special Thanks
Vidya Shank

Scribes: Samaira Seth
Samaira Aggarwal
Adya Paish
Priya Mohata

Artists:
Kanyasa Vriyal
Tiya Singh
Saara Coel
Peehu Tibrewal
Rea Gayal
Adriika Dasmal

